While the look and feel of an application is determined by many individual components, some organization is necessary in order to unify appearance and structure of individual icon sets used within those components.

The Tango Desktop Project defines an icon style guideline to which artists and designers can adhere. A sample implementation of the style is available as an icon theme based upon a standardized icon naming specification. In addition, the project provides transitional utilities to assist in creating themes for existing desktop environments, such as GNOME and KDE.
